Leading Light

Dhruv Panchal

Teaching might be your occupation, but;
I will never forget your efforts and dedication,
For me You've opened the door of imagination.
Because of you I completed school and graduation.

You helped me shaping my future bright,
You taught me what's wrong or right.
In this dark world you are the light,
You taught me to read and to write.

Sometimes friendly and sometimes strict,
You find one convict in any class conflict.
Class gossip were clearly a restrict,
Even so doing that we get flicked.

A teacher boon to society, so polite,
Available to clear doubts whether noon or night.
You guide us to paint our canvas white,
Second parent on earth and we call it right.

I am grateful to have you as my motivation,
As you are full of information and education.
That is why you became my inspiration, and;
Your teaching will always get appreciation.

Bio:

In 2022, Dhruv Panchal discovered his voice through writing. A crucial decision led him to arts, where words became his power. He completed his BA in Literature from Tolani college of arts and science and he works alongside his father in garage business, while managing to study online for his Masters in mass communication and Journalism. He writes about nature and current affairs, undistracted by social media and gaming. With a portfolio of 30+ poems in three languages, his impact grows. Through his words, he strives to create a better world.
